Introduction

This department was formed on the reorganisation of the National Health Service in 1974. It forms part of the Lothian Health Board and is responsible for the community health services transferred from local authorities to health boards in 1974 viz. Child health services, community health and nursing services, epidemiological and preventative services. Its records are thus essentially those of the former Public Health Department of the City of Edinburgh.

Edinburgh was the first Scottish local authority to appoint a Medical Officer of Health: Henry Duncan Littlejohn was appointed in 1862. Public health matters originally came under the Lord Provost's Committee of the Town Council. Following the Public Health (Scotland) Act of 1867, a Public Health Committee was set up by the Town Council in 1872.

The Public Health Committee was responsible for sanitary matters and the control of infectious diseases. Its remit was gradually extended to cover in addition: the administration of municipal hospitals*; maternity and child welfare; the control of venereal diseases; veterinary matters; food hygiene; environmental health; mental health services; health visiting and home nursing services. In 1948 the municipal hospitals became part of the National Health Service. Several more functions of the Health Department were transferred to the Lothian Health Board in 1974, and the Community Services and Communicable Diseases Division was formed to administer child health services, community health and nursing services, epidemiological and preventative services.

A full description of the history and work of Edinburgh Health Department will be found in A Doctor and Two Policemen: The History of Edinburgh Health Department, 1862 - 1974 by H. P. Tait, Edinburgh, 1974. (Available from the Environmental Health Department, City of Edinburgh District Council).

3 Infectious Diseases Registers, 1906-1997

One of the Public Health Department's most important functions was the control and treatment of infectious diseases.

Edinburgh introduced a system of voluntary notification of pulmonary tuberculosis (phthisis) in 1903, followed by compulsory notification in 1907.

Tuberculosis patients were treated at the Royal Victoria Dispensary, the Royal Victoria Hospital, Polton Farm Colony and the City Hospital. The Royal Victoria Dispensary, Hospital and the Farm Colony had been set up by Sir Robert Philip, one of the pioneers in the treatment of tuberculosis: they were transferred to the City of Edinburgh in 1914. Further tuberculosis beds were later provided at Craiglockhart Poorhouse, East Pilton Hospital and the Royal Hospital for Sick Children. When the hospitals and the dispensary were transferred to the National Health Service in 1948, the Public Health Department continued their work in prevention of the disease and in after care of patients in their homes.

12 Edinburgh Parish Council Minutes, 1921-1930

Before 1930 the parish councils in Scotland were responsible for providing poor-law hospitals for the destitute sick. These hospitals either formed part of the parish's poor houses or else were separate buildings. Edinburgh Parish Council was responsible for Craigleith and Seafeld Poorhouses and for Craiglockhart Poorhouse Hospital. In 1929 the Local Government (Scotland) Act transferred these hospitals to Edinburgh Town Council. The Act took effect from 16th May 1930 when Craigleith became the Western General Hospital and Seafeld the Eastern General Hospital. Both these hospitals were up-graded and made available to the general public as part of the local authority's public health provision.

- 1        1964-1974    County and Burgh Death Transfers. Contains entries for County, Cockenzie, Dunbar, East Linton, Haddington, North Berwick, Prestonpans and Tranent. Details include: patient's name, address, age and sex; date and time [of death?]; hospital; and cause of death.

47 Registers of Notification of Births, 1916-1962

The requirement to keep these registers resulted from the Notification of Births (Extension) Act of 1915. They give a running number by year, date of birth, the baby's surname and address, sex, whether full term or premature, alive or dead, visitor's initials and reports. The report usually consists of the doctor's name or the hospital where the baby was born.

From LHB16/47/10, the arrangement is chronological by date of birth, one page per date and including the date notification was received. The covering dates are the dates of birth and each entry includes the notification date. Because notifications were not necessarily on the same day as the date of birth, those dates are sometimes approximate.

From LHB16/47/26, the volumes indicate whether bba (born before arrival); stillborn; premature; legitimate; illegitimate; if mother from outside Edinburgh; hospital or nursing home; date of first visit by health visitor; attended by: doctor, hospital district staff, dispensary, nurse. From LHB16/47/33, whether analgesia was administered is also recorded and from LHB16/47/37 child immunisation is included.

From 1916 the volumes are titled 'Notification of Births Register'. Acc 04/20 - AS 8/2010.
